

GUIDE

The Permission Signals Audit

Find the hidden ways you're holding back in your business or community —
and take one self-led action today.

LIZ LEMARCHAND

Money & Growth for Women

What Are Permission Signals?

Permission signals are the subtle ways women give away authority in business or community leadership — over-explaining, softening, waiting for approval, or holding back until everything feels perfect.

They do not mean you are weak. They often mean you learned to stay safe by staying agreeable.

Why this matters

- ◆ They blur your message.
- ◆ They slow your decisions.
- ◆ They delay visibility, sales, and growth.

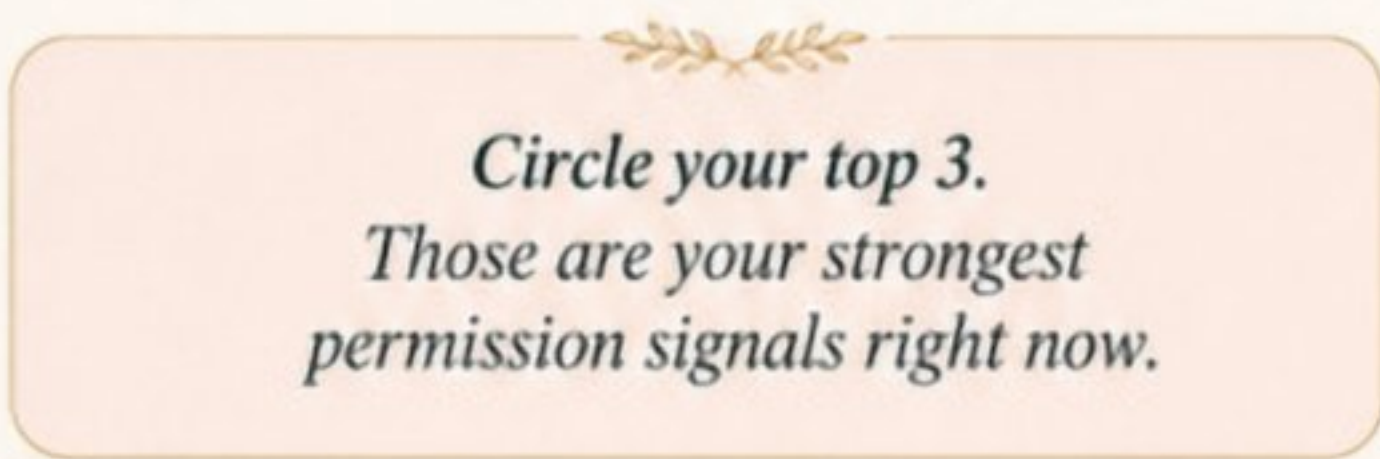

As you move through this audit, notice what feels familiar. Awareness is the first shift.

Audit Checklist

Read each statement and check the ones that feel true right now.

- ☐ 1. I over-explain my prices, offers, or decisions.
- ☐ 2. I ask for feedback when I already know what I want.
- ☐ 3. I soften what I mean so I do not come across as too much.
- ☐ 4. I delay posting, selling, or launching until I feel more ready.
- ☐ 5. I avoid following up because I do not want to seem pushy.
- ☐ 6. I rewrite things over and over instead of publishing them.
- ☐ 7. I downplay my expertise, experience, or results.
- ☐ 8. I say just, maybe, or sorry when making an offer.
- ☐ 9. I wait for people to choose me instead of making a clear invitation.
- ☐ 10. I fear disappointing people if I set a boundary.
- ☐ 11. I change direction quickly when a new idea appears.
- ☐ 12. I want certainty before I take action.

*Circle your top 3.
Those are your strongest permission signals right now.*

Your Top Pattern

Whichever pattern feels strongest is your current growth edge.

1

The Over-Explainer

You add too many words to make people comfortable.
Self-led shift: say it clearly and stop there.

2

The Softener

You dilute your power with just, maybe, or apologies.
Self-led shift: speak with calm conviction.

3

The Waiter

You delay action until you feel perfectly ready.
Self-led shift: move before certainty arrives.

4

The Approval Seeker

You look outward for permission before deciding.
Self-led shift: back your own decision first.

*Awareness creates choice.
Choice creates self-leadership.*

Self-Led Reframes

Try these simple shifts in language and energy:

INSTEAD OF

TRY

What do you think
I should do?

Here is the decision
I am making.

I do not want to sound salesy.

I can be clear and kind
at the same time.

I need more time
before I post this.

I can share the version
I have now.

I hope this is not too expensive.

This is the price for the value I provide.

Sorry to bother you...

I wanted to follow up on this.

Clarity is not harsh. Directness is not aggression.

Take One Self-Led Action Today

Choose one:

- Make one clear invitation.
- Send one follow-up message.
- Name one boundary.
- Post the version that is ready.
- Decide without polling everyone.

My mini action plan

What I am avoiding:

The self-led action I will take:

When I will do it:

Simple script

Hi [Name], I wanted to follow up on our last conversation. If this is still on your mind, I would be happy to support you. Let me know if you would like the next step.

Ready to go deeper?

Inside Money & Growth for Women, I help midlife women build calmer sales confidence, clearer messaging, and more self-led business and community growth — without pushy tactics.

Inside the community you will find:

-  Supportive community conversations
-  Practical trainings and tools
-  Sales, mindset, and visibility support
-  Workshops and growth resources

Visit:
lizlemarchand.com

Join Money & Growth for Women:

[https://www.skool.com/
money-growth-for-women-2353/about](https://www.skool.com/money-growth-for-women-2353/about)

Created by
LIZ LEMARCHAND

Money & Growth for Women