

YOUR

Selling Archetype Guide

Which energy are you really selling from?

LIZ LEMARCHAND

Welcome

I believe the way you sell is an extension of who you are, not a performance you put on. When you sell from the wrong energy for you, it feels exhausting even when it works. When you sell from the right one, it feels like an extension of your presence, not a separate skill you have to force.

This guide will walk you through your result from the Selling Archetype Quiz, show you where that energy shows up in real sales conversations, and give you a clear picture of all five archetypes so you can recognize them in yourself going forward. Selling does not have to feel like pressure. It can feel like clarity.

Your Result

[This page is dynamically generated per quiz result in the live version. The five expanded result write-ups below can each serve as this page depending on which archetype the reader landed on.]

Queen

You lead with confidence and presence. The Queen does not chase the sale, she invites it, because her sense of worth was never up for negotiation in the first place. This is the calmest, most magnetic energy to sell from, and it is also the hardest to fake, because people can feel the difference between true ease and performed confidence.

Where it shows up: you state your price without flinching, you let silence sit instead of rushing to fill it, and you do not take a no personally.

Reflection prompt: Where in your business are you still letting your nerves speak louder than your Queen?

Sage

You sell with clarity and strength. The Sage does not need to convince anyone of anything, she simply tells the truth plainly and lets the other person decide. This is a deeply respected energy in sales, because it signals that you trust your own judgment enough not to need theirs.

Where it shows up: you hold your boundaries without over-explaining, and you say no without softening it into an apology.

Reflection prompt: Where could a little more warmth round out your clarity, without losing your edge?

Mother

You sell from generosity, and that generosity is genuinely one of your gifts. But when it goes unchecked in a sales conversation, it can quietly become self-abandonment, over-explaining, over-delivering before anyone has paid you, discounting out of guilt rather than strategy.

Where it shows up: you find yourself listing every feature just in case it is not enough, or feeling guilty for holding your price.

Reflection prompt: What would it feel like to let your offer be enough, without adding more to earn the yes?

Huntress

You sell with drive and momentum, and that determination has likely taken you far. The risk is that drive can tip into urgency, and urgency reads as pressure rather than confidence, even when your intentions are good.

Where it shows up: multiple urgent follow-ups, a flicker of panic when a prospect goes quiet, the instinct to convince rather than let someone arrive at their own yes.

Reflection prompt: What would it feel like to trust the silence instead of chasing it?

Lover

You sell through warmth and connection, and people are genuinely drawn to you for it. The risk is leaning on charm instead of clarity, softening the ask until it disappears entirely because being direct feels like it might cost you the relationship.

Where it shows up: deflecting price questions with humor, avoiding the direct ask, worrying someone will not like you if you hold your boundary.

Reflection prompt: What direct sentence have you been avoiding saying out loud?

The Five Selling Archetypes

We all carry every archetype within us. What matters is recognizing which one is driving the bus in a given moment, and choosing the one that actually serves you.

Queen	CALIBRATED	Confident, grounded, leads from self-assurance, not need.
Sage	CALIBRATED	Strategic, clear, holds her boundaries without apology.
Mother	MISCALIBRATED	Generous to a fault, over-gives and under-charges out of guilt.
Huntress	MISCALIBRATED	Driven and goal-oriented, can tip into urgency and pressure.
Lover	MISCALIBRATED	Warm and magnetic, can lean on charm instead of a direct ask.

Where Sustainable Selling Lives

Queen and Sage energy are where confident, sustainable selling lives, the kind that does not burn you out or ask you to abandon yourself to close the deal. They are not personality types you either have or do not have. They are energies you can learn to access on purpose, in the moments that matter most.

If you recognized yourself in Mother, Huntress, or Lover energy in this guide, that is not a flaw to fix. It is simply information about where you have been selling from a place of fear instead of presence. The work is not becoming a different person. It is learning to access Queen and Sage energy on demand, especially in the moments when your nervous system wants to default to an old pattern.

This is the exact work I help women do inside my world, learning to sell, price, and ask for what they are worth without abandoning themselves to get the yes.

Keep Going

If this guide gave you language for something you have felt for a long time, you are exactly who this community was built for. Join a community of women learning to sell, price, and grow their businesses from Queen and Sage energy, not pressure or people-pleasing.

JOIN THE FREE COMMUNITY

With warmth,
Liz